TEXAS HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

House Membership

Representative Kelly Hancock

Biographical Information

Kelly Hancock's commitment to public service began just as he and Robin started their family. A leader with a positive, "can do" attitude, Hancock decided to run for the Birdville School Board shortly after the birth of his first child, Chloe. After graduating from Baylor University, Hancock returned to Tarrant County and immediately began serving in the community by becoming involved in various civic and religious organizations. He subsequently spent the next 13 years working with all aspects of the education industry.

As education found abundant headline space during the special session of the 79th Legislature, Hancock's experience and success at the local level catapulted his name to the top of the list to fill the seat at the State Capitol previously held by Representatives Bill Carter and Bob Griggs. In a crowded 2006 Republican primary, Hancock shocked many in the political arena by winning a four candidate race without a runoff before completing the general election where he comfortably defeated his opponents.

As a testament to his work ethic, Hancock has received recognition for his business success by being named to the "Top 40 Under 40" by the Tarrant Business Press and the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce's "Emerging Business" Award.

Hancock's extensive business enterprises with Advanced Chemical Logistics, Agvantage Farm and Ranch, Hancock Industries and CKC Trinity Investment has provided him with a prolific understanding of issues dealing with agriculture, real estate, environmental quality and regulated industry. It is with this diversity of experience that Kelly Hancock seeks to represent the interests of his constituents in Tarrant County and the State of Texas. His foundational beliefs support traditional family values, financial accountability and local control.

Kelly married his high school and college sweetheart Robin Harrison in 1987. They have three children: Chloe, Skylar and Harrison. As a family, the Hancocks stay very involved in the community through their participation in school, church and community events.
